

Parapsychology is a study of paranormal activities and phenomena. It is regarded as a pseudoscience by many scholars.

It is not an academic discipline since no major world University has such a department or division nor even a course in it. I checked four Universities online: Oxford, Cambridge, Harvard and Princeton. There is nothing on parapsychology.

There is a parapsychology department on the Duke University called Duke Parapsychology Labs. After J. B. Rhine retired he opened the Foundation for the Research into the Nature of Man (FRNM), today called Rhine Research Center. In 1937, a first edition of the Journal of Parapsychology was published. On their website they say that an academic research into the field of parapsychology began at Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, in 1930.

Under APA (American Psychological Association) list of psychology branches I didn't find a parapsychology neither. However, on APA divisions page I did find "Society for Military Psychology" and "Society for the Psychology of Religion and Spirituality" which probably cover some aspects belonging to the parapsychology.

One could get an impression that all in science, particularly psychology and psychiatry, is known and explained. Yet, most of the human brain is still a mystery. Not to mention an entire Universe.

Psychology is the study of mind and behavior having main fields of interest in clinical (general), cognitive (mental), developmental (life experience), evolutionary (progress through a course of the human history), forensic (criminal investigation and law), health (medical), neuropsychology (relation of brain and mind), occupational or organizational (work effectiveness), social (group), military and consumer research while parapsychology is concerned with following:

Precognition - an ability to see the future. Most famous examples of the prophecies are found in the Bible, Nostradamus texts and Baba Vanga foretellings.

Clairvoyance - "seeing" distant places, objects, people and events. It is an equivalent to the Third Eye mysticism residing in certain Eastern belief systems (hinduism, buddhism).

Telepathy - an ability to communicate via psychic channels.

Extrasensory perception (ESP) or "sixth sense" - an insight into the reality beyond normal, average detecting capabilities (taste, smell, touch, hearing and sight).

Psychokinesis or telekinesis - moving objects and influencing surrounding(s) only using power of the thought.

Out-of-body experiences (OBEs) like during near-death or post-mortem - alleged spiritual departures or transcendences.

Apparitions and hauntings - supernatural manifestations.

Synchronicity - seemingly related but physically unconnected occurrences. In Wolfgang Pauli and Carl Gustav Jung joined work, called "Pauli-Jung conjecture", this scientific duo elaborates the physical and the mental form of the human being each from his own particular perspective: Pauli/quantum and Jung/psychological. They collaboratively set an outlines for the "quantum psychology" as I name it.

UFO sightings and alien abductions - alleged encounters with an extraterrestrial entities.

Physical disorders - balls of fire, electromagnetic anomalies, auras.

Healings and resurrections

Miracles

Alchemy, magic and witchcraft

Mythological creatures (monsters, vampires, shapeshifters)

Legends, folklore, superstition

Possession is a special field of research dealt by psychiatry with medications, in the case of mental disorders like Schizophrenia, or by Catholic Church with exorcism - if it is a matter of a real demonic presence.

What is psy (symbol: Ψ)?

It is a 23rd letter of the Greek alphabet both used in a quantum mechanics (Schrödinger equation) and parapsychology (unknown factor).

It is exactly when I learned about quantum physics, having prior knowledge of a reported paranormal phenomena, when I myself thought how this two could be connected.

Every psychic activity can be explained with a quantum field theory. Some people could be more attached to the underlying base than others. I do not see it as a surprise. There are people who draw or sing better than others.

I think that parapsychology has its place among scientific disciplines as long as conventional science lack proper or any explanation for numerous questions about fundamental layers of the reality.

There is a standard question in the psychology tests asking you are you being followed. I remember surveillance cameras, espionage, consumer monitoring, Internet tracking, hacking applications, barcodes, bank transaction records, all sorts of government control mechanisms and I answer sincerely: yes, I am being followed. Psychology experts proclaim me of being paranoid. Truth is undesirable, oppressed. They force you to lie or to bear the consequences of speaking honestly.

Nazis were obsessed with an esoteric and occult. They formed Thule society, collected mystical artifacts from all around the world and performed dark rituals. While Adolf Hitler studied deutsch folklore and mixed it with a knowledge of genetics and eugenics, in order to restore an ancient Aryan race or proto Indo-European people for whom he believed are the true German blood line predecessors, his associate Heinrich Himmler was more concerned with an arcane. Many aspects of Nazi ideology can be found in the writings of Alfred Rosenberg who even wrote notorious pamphlet "Die Zion Protokolle" (abb.).

Parapsychology movies I recommend are:

The Dyatlov Pass Incident (Renny Harlin, 2013.)

The Atticus Institute (Chris Sparling, 2015.)
